PUZZLES AND ANSWERS.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Northern Neck News, regards The Times as a great puzzle, the greatest that the editor has ever met in his editorial experience. The puzzling features of The Times are thus outlined by our friend:

It is Democratic. It favors trusts. It is Democratic. It favors contraction of the currency. It is Democratic. It favors gov-ernment by injunction. It is Democratic. It favors imperialism, or at least endorses McKinley's course as to the Philippines, and lately apologized almost for some very mild strictures it once made on Alger's shameless and dirty conduct of the War Department. It says in one paragraph that trusts and combinations of capital are not crusts and combinations of capital are not only a necessity, growing out of new conditions, but a benefit to the farmer and laborer and sneers at the opponents thereof as old fogles, and in another paragraph it will become almost lachrymose in its petitions that Democracy "go back" to "Jeffersonian Democracy." If there ever many a birth priest of Demos or the record. was a lish priest of Demos, or the people, it was Jefferson. He thought for them; but was willing to be led by them, and yet The Times jumps into Croker for following the lead of six and a half millions of Democrats registered in 1896. "Be ye in the world but of it." Verily, it looks to us as if The Times was in the ranks of Demo-eratic journalism but not of it. So much for the puzzles. Now let us see if we cannot aid our friend in solving them. Puzzle No. 1. "The Times is Democratic, but favors trusts."

The platform adopted by the State Democratic Convention, lately in session in Norfolk, contained this declaration as to trusts: "We declare our unalterable opposition to criminal trusts and to every Illegal combination of capital."

That's our doctrine to the letter. We are unalterably opposed to criminal trusts and illegal combines. We favor only the good trusts and lawful combines that give the people the best articles at the lowest cost. Measured by the Virginia Democratic platform The Times is strictly orthodox on the trust question, and there is no difficulty about puzzle No. 1.

Puzzle No. 2 "The Times is Democratic, but favors a contraction of the currency." That would be a puzzle if it were true. but in this our contemporary is in error The Times believes in the gold standard, but it has contended for nothing more zealously or more persistently than for an expansion of the currency. We are for free banking, so that each and every community may have all the currency that it needs to carry on its business. Before ever the Democratic Convention of 1892 came out for a repeal of the tax on State bank terms The Times advocated such a repeal, and it has not ceased to advocate it from that time until now.

Puzzle No. 3. "The Times is Democratic, but favors government by injunction."

There is no puzzle here. The Times stands by that good old Democratic doctrine of personal liberty and the protection by law of each and every citizen in his personal and property rights. We believe, therefore, that whenever any man sets out to trespass upon the rights of any other man he should be restrained by law, restrained at the earliest possible moment, and before he has had the opportunity to carry out his threat and do his neighbor an irreparable injury. To that extent, and to that extent only, do we believe in government by injunction, and we know that in this view the Northern Neck News is in entire accord with The Times.

Puzzle No. 4. "The Times is Democratic, but favors imperialism." Another error. The Times is as much opposed as any to imperialism. We abhor the term, but it is the ambition of The Times to be a fair newspaper, and in a spirit of fair play we have said that we did not see how Mr. McKinley could, in honor, have pursued any other course in the Philippines. The Islands are ours and the great body of the inhabitants, who submitted themselves to us and pinned their faith to us, had a right to expect that we would protect them from the insurgents, restore order and set up a stable government. If Mr. McKinley has not been honestly endeavoring to do this, then always tipped with the jewel called fair

As for our position in the Democratic party, we give ourselves little concern about that. When we go to the fireside we find Charles A. Towne, James B. Weaver, Marion Butler, et id omne genus, sitting there with Father Bryan and they look so comfortable that we can't gain our consent to disturb the happy family, and as we do not feel at home in that company we go outside and sit under the big tree in the back yard. Put our place in Democracy is just where it has ever been. We have not departed one jot or one tittle from the faith as delivered to the saints. We are just where we were in 1896, and it interests us no little that whereas in that year we were separated from our brethren by a chasm as deep and as wide as a campaign orator's mouth, in these days we find ourselves comfortably in company with our brethren in Virginia and in more or less political affiliation, yet, as we have said, The Times has not moved a peg.

That is a puzzle, however, which we shall let our Northern Neck contemporary work out for itself.

MR. HAY'S CIRCULAR.

The position which our Secretary of State, Mr. Hav, has taken towards the Chinese imbroglio is the correct one, and it was wise in him to notify the other Powers of the world of that position. He has happily phrased our position in the circular he has sent to the other Powers in saying "we adhere to the policy initiated by us in 1857, of peace with the Chinese nation, of furtherance of lawful commerce, and of protection of lives and property of our citizens by all means guaranteed under extra-territorial treaty right and by the laws of nations. If wrong be done to our author to the uttermost accountability."

This country wants no quarrel with China as a nation. We want peace and friendship with her. We must protect our citizens there, and, in doing that, we must meet force with force, but we want it to be always understood that we are fighting marauders and trespassers and not the Chinese people. We have no quarrel with the Chinese people, and we are determined to live as and be their friends.

In co-operating with the other Powers of the world in our present efforts to rescue our ministers and other citizens we are doing nothing that is inconsistent with this position. That is only a case of the sort of self-defense that is forced to attack in order to make the defense effective. But the Chinese will find that as soon as we have gone as far as those measures of self-defense require us to go, their people will have, in us, the best friend that they have in the world. We may be forced to some apparent hardship in securing the reparations for injuries to our citizens that ordinary justice and self-respect will require us to exact. But that is and always has been the rule of the world, and the Chinese cannot impute unfriendliness to us for doing that. But when peace and order are restored in China, the Chinese will most probably find that the other Powers of the world, England probably excepted, will feel disposed to look upon China as the welves look upon a carcass. Then China will learn who, amongst the Powers, is and who is not her friend. She will find the United States standing strong and steadfast against the imposition upon her of terms that are inconsistent with her national life and national welfare. The United States will especially stand pat upon the proposition that China shall not be parted up and divided out amongst the Powers of Europe, and England will no doubt stand by the United States in that contention. This is the position that the logic of events will force upon the United States, and Mr. Hay should see to it that the Chinese are informed, in every possible way, that this is the position of the United States and that this government will do all in its power to see that this

A New York newspaper says that the introduction of the American-made boot and shoe into Europe has quite revolutionized the former idea that European boots were superior to those made in the United States, It declares that almost every smartly dressed woman seen in London wears American boots or shoes.

This is in keeping with the new order of things. American-made goods are growing in popularity in the old world because they are the best and cheapest. All that we ask for is an open market. If we can only have an opportunity of showing our goods to the Europeans, be sure we shall sell them our wares, and please them, too.

It is certainly good news that there is a hope of having the railroad tracks taken up from Franklin and Bank Streets. That line was always a makeshift, and but for the ownership of Main Street by another line, would never have been allowed. The sooner this error is demedied the better. It is to be hoped that the City Engineer will take hold of Bank Street as soon as the tracks are up and give it its permanent grade, and then that the Street Committee will see that it is repayed in a sultable way. It is certainly an abomi-

WILLIAMSHURG VA July 12-Special, The morning session of the last day of the Dover Euptist Association was called to order at 11 o'clock, after devotional exercises, which were lad by Rev. J. B. Childress. After some unimportant business Dr. John Pollari offered the following resolutions, and spoke strongly for their adoption:

Whereas, we are convinced that in recent years the Dover Association has lost much of its former power for good; and, whereas, at the present session new methods for improving present conditions have been adopted; and whereas, it is to be feared that these new methods will be rendered largely fruitless by two manifest facts—(1) that every session of the body is weakened by the non-attendance of a very considerable proportion of the pastors of the Association, and (2) that delegates from the churches do not come in time, and, even when they come promptly, do not remain to the end of the proceedings—therefore, Resolvei, 1. That all our pastors be affectionately entreated and urgen to attend regularly the sessions of this body, placing this attendance among their most acred and imperative duties, and that our churches be lovingly entreated and our churches be lovingly children urged to send full delegations of laymen that will pledge themselves to appear promptly in their seats and to remain until the final adjournment of the body.

2. That our clerk be instructed at the near approach of our next session to send to each church the foregoing preamble and these resolutions, and ask in behalf of this Association that he paper be read before the assembled church." THE DISCUSSION.

The resolutions were discussed and
